COMPANY OVERVIEW

HISTORY

Nearly three centuries ago, an enterprising man called Jackson Clark rode out to the place we now call Upperlands in Ulster and spotted a dark, narrow stretch of river, babbling as it cascaded over the stones.

With his craftsman's eye, he realised it was a perfect location for a waterwheel that would drive a simple device called a beetling engine. In doing so, he revolutionised the finishing of fabric in Northern Ireland forever.

The flame lit by the Clark pioneers is still burning bright. In a new state-of-the-art manufacturing facility, strategically situated in Northern Ireland with tarriff-free access to the UK and EU the business continues to develop and help innovate textiles for our customers.

Today, William Clark & Son supports a wide variety of clients in a number of markets where reliable textiles are needed.

Our capabilities

Flame Retardant Finishing, Antimicrobial, Bleaching, Dyeing, Coating, Lamination, Powder Point, Handle Enhancement, Water & Stain Repellent Finishing, Brushing & Raising, Schreiner & Calendaring, Slitting, Bias Cutting, Coating, Fusible coating, Fabric Raising, Slitting, Scatter Coating, Knife Coating, Digital printing, Screen printing.
